Help Found for Those in Need: Crisis Centers Available

by Dave Atkins

A few months ago, I wrote an article about a young man with a drinking problem who was in need of help but couldn't find any (March 7, 1990; Vol. 3, No. 18). After numerous phone calls and a lot of help from Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally's office, I finally obtained a list of some of the places that are available to those who need help in a crisis situation.

After talking to many of these so-called "crisis centers," I discovered that such centers are not necessarily places for what you or I would call a crisis.

If, for example, you have been drinking, and you suddenly decide to seek help for your problem right away, that does not automatically qualify you to be admitted into a center. The same is true for drug-related "emergencies." Instead, the best time to apply for admittance to a center is after you have quit using drugs and/or alcohol for a few days, and you "have your wits about you."

Why is this so? Well, people who decide that they need help while they are intoxicated often change their mind when they become sober. A good example of this can be found in the young man whom I wrote about in my previous article.

When that young man came to me for help one evening (after normal business hours, when many centers were closed), he was in an intoxicated state. I was unable to get him admitted for treatment anywhere that night, so I set up an appointment for him at the Salvation Army at a later date. I guess he must have changed his mind about getting treatment, because he never kept his appointment. A few days later, he began drinking again, and ended up getting involved in some trouble and going to jail. Although he has been released from jail since then, he is still drinking, to the best of my knowledge.

Until this young man decides, while he is sober, that he needs help, his life will continue to be a mess.

If you would like more information on how to get help, or if you think that you (or someone you know) needs help, and you (or that other person) can stay straight for a day or two, here is a list of places that you can contact for assistance.

The following is a list of human service organizations in Out-Wayne and Monroe County which help people with alcohol and other drug problems. In addition, treatment providers funded by DCC/SEMSAS are also listed. Residents can go to these providers for treatment/counseling. Many agencies are open in the evenings and there are some places that offer 24-hour crisis intervention and handle medical emergencies. These are listed separately. If you need more information, please call the Central Assessment Unit at (313) 283-9444.

THE EDITOR'S OPINION

The Greatest 4-Letter Word

by Dave Atkins

The story that you are about to read has no age barrier, no sex barrier, and no geographical barrier.

The story is concerned with a single four-letter word — love. Mainly, it is about love for a parent or parents.

What really is the definition of that famous four-letter word? If 100 people were asked, there would most likely be 100 different definitions.

I am going to try my best to explain what love means to me — but, then again, this is only my version of that age-old word.

You hear the word mentioned numerous times in churches: "Love your brother and your neighbor."

Boys tell girls and girls tell boys, "I love you." A child tells its parents, "I love you." And a parent tells its child, "I love you."

Actually, you will most likely find the parents telling more of the truth when they tell their children that they love them — even though, at various times in their lives, most children would disagree with that, only to find out in later years that it really was true. No matter what Mom and Dad did, they really loved their children.

Children, and I don't necessarily mean just young children, quite often tell their parents that they love them. And in their own minds, I guess, they really think that they do.

But is love just a word? Some would think so. Simply say, "I love you," and everything is all right. There are some parents who would agree with that, outwardly, because they really want to believe that their children love them.

Children do love their parents, in a selfish sort of way, because they are around — because their parents can do things for them. Children can cry on their parents' shoulders and get the comfort that they are looking for. Children can need financial support and, usually, if they have it, their parents will come through in the pinch. Children can be in need of moral support, and their parents are sure to give it without hesitation.

But . . .

Do you REALLY love your parents? Mother's Day just recently passed and, as most Mother's Days go, millions of flowers were bought and given to Mom, along with cards. The same thing will happen on Father's Day. (Dads will get more cards than flowers, since giving flowers to men doesn't seem to be the thing to do . . . although Dads like flowers, too.)

Now, ask yourself, how many times during the rest of the year do you give your mother or father a card or a bunch of flowers? On their birthday? Christmas? Usually on every one of those days that I just mentioned, a card always says, "I love you."

Cards and flowers are not really that important to most parents, I think. Instead, what is most important is that you do things all year long to show them that you love them. Remember what I said earlier about when you need financial aid? If a parent has the money, you get it. On the other hand, if a parent needs financial aid, do you give it if you have it? Too many times, the answer is a resounding "NO" — especially if the parents are elderly. "The old folks are going to die off soon; I'll never get my money back."

How many times have you repaid your parents all the money they have given you? Did they ever really ask for all of it back? Probably not. But when parents are very old and need help, it is oh-so-much easier to put them into a nursing home than to give them the comfort and assurance that they gave you when you needed it.

Mothers are usually in a more strained position than fathers because most mothers can't see any wrong that their children do, and, if they do see it, they like to ignore it and make believe that it didn't really happen. That's a mother. But what does she get in return from you?

Fathers are usually a lot more firm than mothers, and children get by with less because of him. That is why fathers usually are not as well "loved" as mothers.

Say to your mother or father, "I love you," and many melt at the words. But do you really love them?

When was the last time you washed a dish because they needed the help? When was the last time you cut the grass because they needed the help? When was the last time you took them to dinner because they needed the company? When was the last time you called them and said, "I really don't want anything; I just called to say, 'I love you'?"

When was the last time you bought flowers or a card without it being a special holiday? When was the last time you offered to take them or go with them to church?

When was the last time you just drove up to the house with the kids, and said that you just came for a visit because you missed them?

When was the last time you washed your own clothes for school because your mother was not feeling well? And, when she wasn't feeling well, when was the last time you took her breakfast, lunch, or dinner in bed?

When was the last time you brought your father his paper and a cup of coffee, just because, deep inside, you knew he would want that but wouldn't ask you for it?

When was the last time you washed his car for him without wanting to use it?

When was the last time you cleaned your mother's house for her? Did she ask you to do it, or did you do it because you really love her?

This can go on and on, and some of you will never get the drift of the message (including some mothers and fathers, let alone their children), but the gist of all this is: if you really and truly do love someone, it isn't really the words that count (although they are nice to hear). Mouths can say many things without really meaning what comes out of them. Actions, however, do mean something — actions coupled with the words, "I love you." □

School Board Meeting

by Tom Shamanski

It was announced during the May 14, 1990 meeting of the Romulus Board of Education that Romulus will be an "out-of-formula" school district, effective July 1 of this year. In making the announcement, Romulus Schools Superintendent, Dr. William Bedell, stated, "We are on our way to becoming a well-funded school district." However, both he and Assistant Superintendent for Operations and Finance, Joel Carr, emphasize the "on our way" portion of the statement. It will take time, they cautioned, before the out-of-formula system will run smoothly.

Briefly, an out-of-formula school district is one which receives enough revenue through school taxes that it no longer needs to rely on State aid. Such a school can, therefore, go beyond the State's monetary limit imposed on schools receiving such aid.

During a period of public communication, Ms. Chris Powers, teacher and President of the Romulus Education Association, spoke to the Summer Youth Program (SYP), a topical subject which was tabled at the previous meeting. She wondered how the SYP could be returned to the Board's attention, as the Board hires the Program's supervisors, and the time-frame for action is limited.

In the ensuing discussion, Ms. Powers was told by Board President, Kenneth Berlinn, that a tabled item remains so until a board member resurrects it. Dr. Bedell then reiterated his position on the SYP. He stated that the District should not provide school buildings for SYP because of potential objections from nonteaching union members, plus the number of previous complaints from taxpayers regarding poor student workmanship.

At that point, Ms. Dorothy Murray, a Wick Elementary teacher and former SYP supervisor, spoke "in defense of the student workers." She referred to citations for excellent work, received from building principals as well as the general public. Also, Ms. Murray pointed out that many of the SYP students are special-need students. Therefore, she stated, these students depend on the Program to meet their basic needs and, perhaps, even basic family needs.

No further action was taken.

Joel Carr, Assistant Superintendent for Operations and Finance, recommended that the Board continue a contract with Cadillac Asphalt to pave the Transportation and Board Office areas.

Peter Rabbit a Success

On May 11, the second grade at St. Aloysius School presented a musical version of Beatrix Potter's Peter Rabbit to parents, students, and faculty. All 26 children in the class worked hard learning songs and dances, memorizing lines, and making scenery. The six main characters were: Peter Rabbit (Nate Hargress), Mother Rabbit (Deanna Mullins), Mr. McGregor (Bill Sovinski), Flopsy (Marylee Huff), Mopsy (Barbara Hagerty), and Cottontail (Eric Staten, Joseph Hammer). The remaining members of the class were in the chorus.

The children were thrilled with the large number of parents who showed their support by attending the play. After the play, vegetables from Mr. McGregor's garden were available for all. The children were later able to view the play on videotape. A good time was had by all! □ years. Chris was the captain of the 1990 Eagle volleyball team and was selected to the South Central Conference team as a senior as well.

Chris also started almost every game for this year's softball team in center field, and was one of the leading hitters and run producers during the month of May.

Bruce was awarded the men's Scholar Athlete Award, having accumulated a career GPA of 2.75. Bruce was a four-year letter winner for our wrestling program, and managed to place three consecutive years in the State Tournament. As captain of the 1990 team, Bruce received the highest goal possible in this sport, as he became only the third-ever State Champion at Romulus High School.

Bruce and Chris both plan to attend college in the fall, with Bruce looking to attend Central Michigan University and Chris leaning toward Eastern Michigan University as the place to continue her education. □

4 Locals Named for SCC Honors

by Fred Coleman, Romulus Schools Athletic Director

The spring season scholar athlete winners for the South Central Conference were recently named, with four Romulus young people among those chosen.

Thom Patterson was named to represent the baseball program. Thom has maintained a 3.25 grade point average (GPA) while catching nearly every inning this season for our varsity baseball team.

Angie Slawinski carried a 3.71 GPA during the 1989-90 softball season while leading the team in runs scored and accumulating a .352 batting average.

Dennis Tessin was the men's track distance runner for the third consecutive year. As a junior, he achieved a 3.81 GPA and a third ranking in the class of 1991.

Tearza Johnson recently took second in the 100-meter dash at the South Central Conference meet, and also placed third in the 200-meter race in the State Regional Tournament. Tearza will represent Romulus at the State Championships on June 2 in Midland, Michigan. While achieving these excellent feats, Tearza has also managed to accumulate a GPA of 3.67.

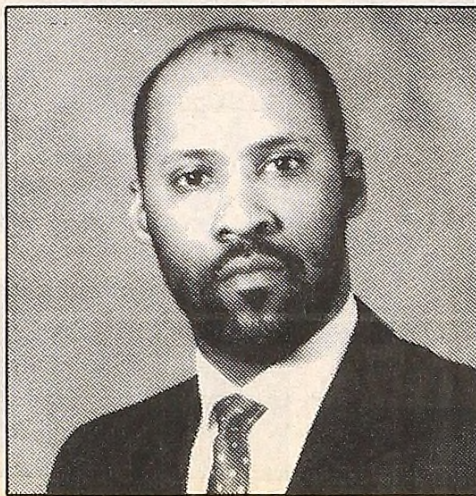

Congratulations to all four of these fine student athletes on their honors, as they have, no doubt, put a great deal of effort into earning them. □

Romulus Bands Are "One"derful at State Festivals

Here it is, folks: it happened, has not happened before, and may not ever happen again. The symphonic bands of both Romulus Junior High School and Romulus High School received all "I" (one) ratings at the recent state festivals. (Both bands also accomplished this feat at the district festivals last March.) The Romulus band program, which numbers 380 students in the junior and senior high schools and over 600 students systemwide, can be particularly proud of this moment.

Ratings for all Romulus Schools bands during the 1990 season were as follows (note: Roman numerals following each band represent Judge One, Judge Two, Judge Three, Sight Reading, and Final ratings, respectively):

District: Junior High Concert Band (I, II, II, II, II), Senior High Concert Band (II, II, II, I, II), Senior High Jazz Band (II, II, II, not rated, II), Junior High Symphonic Band (I, I, I, I, I), and Senior High Symphonic Band (I, I, I, I, I).

State: Junior High Symphonic Band (I, I, I, I, I) and Senior High Symphonic Band (I, I, I, I, I).

State festivals were particularly severe this year, as the judges were given instructions to be particularly demanding. The High School Symphonic Band performed at Lansing Everett, along with Milford, Okemos, Southfield, Port Huron, and Ypsilanti, with Romulus receiving the only "I" rating. It was the first time ever that a band from Romulus

High School received all "I" ratings at the State Festival. Individual letter grades included 17 "A"s and three "B"s, also an all-time record.

The Junior High Symphonic Band performed in Clarkston and was the only band to receive all "I" ratings out of the 16 schools represented. Individual letter grades paralleled the High School, with 17 "A"s and three "B"s included. For the Junior High Symphonic Band, this also kept alive an 11-year streak of "I" ratings at state festivals.

Band directors Richard Kruse and Henry James wish to congratulate their students on their outstanding work, and both wish to thank parents for their extra help at the festivals. The standards were way up there this year, and there were not many happy bus rides home from the festival sites. Mr. James treated the High School students to a pizza party before the ride to Lansing, and Mr. Kruse treated the Junior High students to pizza after the Festival at a Waterford Pizza Hut.

The accomplishments of these 150 Romulus youngsters speak highly of the overall educational program in the Romulus Schools. Parents, citizens, and school officials can all be very proud, as well as the teachers in our schools who help prepare the students in their educational endeavors.

Junior High Band Tours Romulus, Alabama, and Orlando, Florida

Last year, the Romulus Junior High Band performed a special concert in Romulus, New York. This year, the Band visited the third Romulus in the United States — Romulus, Alabama. Romulus, Alabama, is located in Tuscaloosa County, quite close to the home of the University of Alabama.

The Band gave a concert at Myrtlewood Elementary, the school closest to Romulus and in the attendance area of Romulus, at 9 a.m. on Thursday, May 24. The 75-member band performed "pops" selections before visiting Romulus, Alabama.

Band Director Richard Kruse noted that Romulus, New York, is a rather affluent area, with lake-front property going at $2,000 per foot on Cayoga and Seneca Lakes, but that Romulus, Alabama, is a rural area — which, according to Myrtlewood principal Jim Cain, is "really rural," with houses or trailers one-half to one mile apart. Mr. Cain noted that there are not really any neighborhoods, as such, in the area.

We do not know if anyone else in Romulus, Michigan, has visited both of the other Romuli (plural from Latin).

The Junior High Band then continued on to Orlando, Florida, for a performance at Sea World on Friday, May 25. Students visited Sea World, then tried out the new Typhoon Lagoon and its "wave machine" and water slides before going to "Pleasure Island" to a "Teen Age Nite Club." Saturday found the students visiting Disney World, and Sunday, the MGM Studios, before the trip home.

Selections performed by the Band included "The Twist," "Cover Girl," "A Groovy Kind of Love," "Hangin' Tough," and "Lost in Your Eyes," along with standards "Mony, Mony," "Tequila," "Lean on Me," "La Bamba," "Twist and Shout," "Wipe Out," and Billy Joel's "We Didn't Start the Fire." □

by Dr. Jeffrey A. August, Foot Specialist and Surgeon

As the base for your body, the feet are your point of balance. If your feet are balanced, you can change your standing position easily and move about comfortably and with little effort.

Imbalance occurs when the parts of the foot aren't positioned to carry body weight. When the foot can't support the body properly, stress results. Other problems, such as ulcers on the ball of the foot, corns, calluses, and fallen arches, are often caused by foot imbalance.

One or more factors could be responsible for the imbalance. The size and shape of a bone in the foot or weak ankles and ligaments can cause problems. Poor posture, obesity, arthritis, improperly fitted shoes, and injuries are other causes. Stress on the feet causes stress on the rest of the body and eventually results in pain.

The problem may be corrected with a three-part procedure:

- You'll need a complete foot exam, including x-rays. A number of factors — body posture, occupation, and medical history — will be considered.
- Once a diagnosis is made, a treatment plan will be developed.
- Orthotics may be used as the final phase of treatment. These shoe inserts are made specifically to fit your foot. Once your orthotics are complete, they will give you the balanced base of support that you can't get from your own feet. □

Rovers Walk for March of Dimes

by Wayne Garnatz

On April 29, the Romulus Rovers Walking Club took part, once again, in the annual 25-kilometer (15 mile) March of Dimes Walk America in Wyandotte. Our Rovers had a few more entrants in this year's event, and the Club's pledges totalled over $1,000. Altogether, the walkers at Wyandotte raised $85,000, adding to the $1.3 million collected from nine other walking sites.

The Romulus Rovers wish to thank all of you who pledged to our members, our young people at Romulus Junior High and Romulus High School, and/or your friends and relatives who walked for the March of Dimes.

The Romulus Rovers Walking Club is now entering into its second year. Our group walks three times a week (some members walk as little as once a week), and includes walkers of every speed (from a snail's pace to race-walking). We walk at various sites in the summer, and we have a very nice indoor place that we use in the winter.

We have some very exciting walks and special events planned for our members this year. For more information on the Club, call 941-2215. □

"U of M" Beats "State" in Halecreek's College Bowl, '90

by Dave Atkins

I recently had an enjoyable day at Halecreek Elementary School judging a contest called College Bowl '90.

Students were picked to represent two major colleges in the State: the University of Michigan and Michigan State University.

Since it was my first experience at doing something like this, I was very nervous at first, but Mr. Art McPharlin, ex-Principal of Halecreek, assured me that there was nothing to be nervous about. The rules and format were explained to me, and then I became even more nervous.

This was the way that the contest worked: Mr. McPharlin, who asked the questions, would first ask a "toss-up" question. The student who thought that he/she had the correct answer would push a button, which would light up a light for the monitor, and he/she would be asked a question which was worth 10 points. If the answer was correct, then that team was asked the "bonus" question, which was worth 25 points. If that team couldn't answer the question correctly, the other team would be given a chance to respond for the bonus points.

As it turned out, the student body representing the University of Michigan won by a small margin, and I can tell you now that all the students from both teams were absolutely marvelous, because none of those bonus questions were easy ones.

The answers were given to the judges in advance, and it was a good thing that they were. (I was unaware that the students had been studying from an encyclopedia for a long time in order to prepare for the competition.) At one point, I turned to one of the other judges and said, "I sure am glad we have the answers, because if we didn't, I would be in some real deep trouble."

As it turned out, though, students and judges alike had a great time, and I came back to the office a nervous wreck. I had a very hard time understanding how students with a sixth-grade education could even begin to study for something that involved, let alone actually understand all that they read. I guess we just have some very smart kids in our school system.

By the way, I would like to wish the new Principal of Halecreek, Ms. Lynne Mossoian, a happy belated birthday and good luck in her new job. Mr. McPharlin left behind some big shoes to fill, but Ms. Mossoian seems to have a good rapport with the students, and she is doing just fine, thank you. □

The Lighter Slice

A Pathological Woodpecker

by Tom Shamanski

Over the past few years, I've discovered lecturing can be a good way to make a little extra money. Mostly, I lecture on forensic pathology, or who killed who, and how. Certainly, I'm not going to get rich, here, but I've found, from kindergarten down to the university level, there's a real need for Pathological Lecturers.

As with most things, you've got to have a gimmick to succeed (being a convicted felon is always good). Mine's relatively simple . . . I dress up as a Woodpecker. Of course, usually I do this only when lecturing to high school or university students, as their attention span is somewhat erratic. Also, with the little kids, I've found that if I'm wearing my outfit, they just want to sit on my knee and tell me what they want for their Bird-day.

But, again, with the older kids, the Woodpecker outfit works well. However, if I do lose their attention and notice that students are about to nod off, I simply hop over to them and peck them on their heads. It usually works — but, of course, there was that one time a student pressed charges against me for pecking abuse. Ultimately, a judge ordered me to obtain written pecking permission from all parents, stating that I could, indeed, peck their kids if I felt that there was a pecking need. Actually, the incident received substantial publicity and became known as "Woody's Pecking Order."

Now, perhaps you're thinking it's only my five-dollar fee that makes these lectures worthwhile. But it's also the interaction I have with the more astute pathological aficionados that keeps me paying eight dollars to have my Woodpecker outfit dry-cleaned and fluffed.

When starting on the lecture tour, a young high school lad asked me how we analyze fatal bullets, exactly. At the time, I had to tell him that I'd get back to him . . . a tough question. Weeks later, this kid started calling me continuously, asking how do we analyze bullets, exactly! In the end, I had to do a week's worth of research, exactly, but was finally able to tell him that we look at those bullets, over and over and over.

There was also a somewhat unpleasant incident that occurred when I was lecturing to graduate students at Admiral Byrd University. Unfortunately, I had to peck the head of a pretty young thing sitting in the first row. You see, she had this sly grin, and kept winking at me and puckering her lips. Naturally, I figured that she was practicing for community theater or something, so, fluttering my wings a bit, I hopped over to her and took aim at the top of her head.

Just as I was coming down with my first peck, she grabbed my beak and pulled my head down to hers.

"I love birds, and I want you, you Woodpeckeryou," she whispered. "What do you say to that, big guy?"

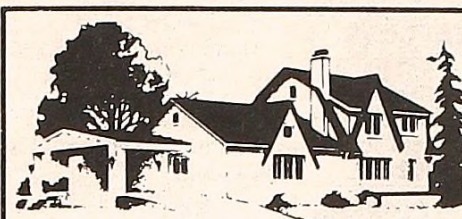

Yikes! Instantly, my heart was racing faster than the Road Runner's . . . with massive steroids. Hey, she was one beautiful creature, and she wanted me!

Well, feeling darn good about all this, I wanted to tell her to wait after class. But, when I opened my beak to speak, all that came stumbling out was "Chirp, chirp, chirp." I COULDN'T TALK! Immediately, my body began jerking and I was starting to pant like a bird. So, there I was, in front of this gorgeous beauty, bouncing and going, "Chirp (pant, pant) chirp (pant, pant) chirp."

Quickly, I returned to the front of the class to resume lecturing. But it didn't get any better — chirp, pant, chirp, pant. Within seconds, most of the students were flying out of class. Then, the lass who had caused me all this grief rose from her chair and said, "Too bad, Bird-man — no telling how far we could have soared together."

With that, she hopped to the window, perched a moment on the ledge, and flew away . . . no kidding. □
